POOEY THE POET

When Pooey Parrot heard a bit of poetry he liked, he could remember it and recite it in wonderful style. This was quite remarkable for any bird, and his sign in the pet shop read: "This is Pooey. He is a genius. When you hear him recite poetry you will not think $500 is too much for him."

Sad to tell however, while nobody thought $500 was too much for a genius of a poetry-spouting bird, nobody bought him, either. The shop owner didn't much care, because he loved poetry, himself, and found a great deal of pleasure in Pooey's recitations. But he did worry about Pooey's feelings. "You're not unhappy about nobody buying you, are you?" he thoughtfully asked.

"When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes, I all alone bewep my outcast state," Pooey answered, quoting Shakespeare, "... I scorn to change my state with kings."

"Pooey, I'm raising your price to $1000," the owner said. "And I hope no one buys you away from me!"

But one day a customer came in and said, "The genius bird what recites poetry. I love poetry. Wrap him up!"

The customer didn't look too much like a poetry lover, but the shop owner obediently began to punch holes in a carrying box. Pooey wasn't really anxious to leave the pet shop, but he was rather glad that somebody wanted him. He decided to show off his skill to his new master. "When Lilacs last in the door-yard bloom'd, And the great star early droop'd in the western sky in the night," Pooey proudly recited.

"Hey," said the customer, "What's wid da double-talk? I t'ought dis boid said poetry!"

"Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered weak and weary" Pooey started again, hopefully.

"Gimme back my t'ousand dollars!" yelled the customer. "You din't say da bird talked a foreign language! I don't want no bird I don't unnastand!"

Pooey glared at the man. Then he opened his beak to recite one more time: "Roses are red, violets are blue, Your name is Fred and mine is Poo!"

"Hey!" yelled the customer delightedly. "He CAN recite if he wantsa! I'll take him after all!"

For answer Pooey bit him right on the nose. While the customer yelled the owner gave him back his money and shoved him out the door. Then the owner turned back to Pooey. "See if you like this new sign I'm making for you," he said. Pooey watched happily as he lettered:

"CRY AND WAIL HE'S NOT FOR SALE."

SMOKY

Smoky was very unhappy. In fact, he was just about the most unhappy train in the whole railroad yard. And the reason he was so unhappy was BECAUSE he was so little!

"Oh, how I wish I were bigger!" he'd wail. And then he would look at himself — at his snub-nosed little headlight, at his tiny, little cars — and sigh long and loud.

"Now! Now!" the big trains always laughed. "Don't get too big for your smoke stack, Smoky! You're the baby of this yard, remember? YOU can't expect to be big and important like US!"

Then Smoky would droop his whistle in shame and misery, feeling completely useless and unwanted.

And that's the way things were when the great accident happened. You must have read about it in your newspapers. Nobody could believe that a big, beautiful, streamlined passenger train could actually GET STUCK IN A TUNNEL!! But that's just what happened! The crack, new Super Chief Limited had been too big to get through the new Tyler Tunnel! And now five hundred passengers were stuck in there, along with the Super Chief!

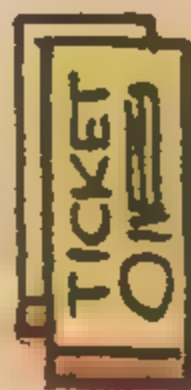

"Send Smoky in," shouted the president. "He is the only train we have that's small enough to get into that tunnel, and save those people!!" He patted Smoky's little engine joyfully, and Smoky huffed and puffed with pride!

And so Smoky — the littlest train of them all — rescued five hundred people ALL BY HIMSELF, and brought them back safe and sound!! He was dead-tired when he slid back into his place in the yard, but he was too happy to care.

"Now how do you feel about being little?" asked the wise, old freight train who was his friend.

"I'm proud!" smiled Smoky peacefully. "I'm PROUD to be THE LITTLEST TRAIN IN THE WHOLE YARD!!"

WRIST RADIO

RECEIVES BROADCASTS UP TO 50 MILES
WITH ATTACHED ANTENNA
WEAR IT LIKE A WATCH
LISTEN IN LIKE A RADIO

Wow! A wrist radio like the one used by the famous detective character that really works. Yes, imagine receiving broadcasts up to about 50 miles, using the antenna attachment. Without attaching the antenna lead in clip (which is included), to a substantial antenna such as the dial stop on a telephone, reception is limited to a few miles. Think what fun it will be to have your own personal wrist radio that actually permits you to listen to your own programs without disturbing others, and there are no batteries, no tubes—nothing to wear out. Makes detective and battle games seem more real, pretending to transmit messages, and getting help in the nick of time. Complete with private earphone.

FACTLESS FACTS

There are some things you believe as facts and you'll argue until you're blue in the face if anyone doubts you — that is, if anyone doubts the fact.

Well, we plan to shed some light on some of these so-called "facts."

For instance, take this:

"The four elements — fire, water, earth, and air — are not elements!" Each is really a compound — made up of a union or mixture of other elements.

That's the type of "fact" we mean to disprove, those little things that through the years have become accepted as truth but which are, in actuality, a misleading lie.

Another one of those "facts" is that the "whale is a fish." But, in truth, the whale is warm-blooded and suckles its young, qualities peculiar only to the mammal. While on the subject of whales, people have been misled by the term "whale bone." There is no bone in whale bone. It is Baleen, an elastic substance found in the mouth of a whale.

Here's another one:

"Hudson Bay is not a bay!"

It is an inland sea, very much larger than a bay which is only an inlet of a sea.

* * *

And, "A guinea pig is not a pig nor is a prairie dog a dog!" Both are rodents. The guinea pig does not even come from Guinea; it is found on the western coast of South America. The prairie dog is an American burrowing rodent, very closely related to the groundhog or woodchuck.

* * *

"A lead pencil is not a lead pencil!" The part that is written with is graphite — one of the many forms the element carbon takes.

* * *

"Panama Hats are not made in Panama!" They are manufactured in Ecuador.

Or, "There is no camel's hair in a camel's hair brush!" The brushes are made from the hair of squirrels, an animal not even distantly related to the camel.

Or, "There is no kid in kid gloves!" A kid is a baby goat. The gloves are made from lamb skin.

* * *

"There is no chamois in chamois leather!" It is made from the flesh side of sheep skin.

* * *

From another angle, "A pickaxe is not an axe!" It is a type of pick, a heavy, pointed iron or steel tool.

* * *

Then again, "Dresden china does not come from Dresden!" It is made in Meissen, Germany, a city on the Elbe River, approximately northwest of Dresden.

Richie RICH

THE BIGGEST BOOB

"I'm not going to take it any longer," Pvt. Seymour Boob told his sidekick, Louie. "I've been picked on long enough, and now it's my turn to get smart!"

"Gee," said Louie, who was the only GI in camp who did more k.p. than Seymour Boob. "Are you really going to talk back?"

"Of course I am. I'm tired of having work tossed on my back. I'm going to kick, see. Really kick!" Seymour Boob was even surprising himself. He was almost scaring himself.

"Now you stay here, Louie," he said to his friend. "I don't want you to get hurt. I'm going to go back to the barracks and just take it easy! And I'd like to see someone stop me!"

Louie nodded his head. He was too surprised and proud of Seymour to say a word. He watched his buddy walk briskly across the grounds and right into the barracks. Seymour never turned to watch a soul. He was a man with a purpose.

"Gee," Louie mumbled to himself. "I wonder what's going to happen."

Louie didn't wait too long to find out. He took a short walk around the Army grounds, and then slowly tip-toed to the back of the barracks. He pressed his ear up close to the window. What he heard struck him like a bolt of lightning.

Seymour Boob was talking . . .

"Now, listen here, you guys. I've taken enough of your lip! I'm filled up to here, see. Up to here! Now it's my turn to do the talking—and the acting!"

Louie was afraid to look in. He was proud of Seymour, all right, but he was too frightened for himself. He just kept quiet and listened.

"So you're going to take this, Mac Wilson!" He heard a BLAMM! "And this, Timmy!" This time there was a BANG! "And this, Joe!" BIFF! "And I want all of you to leave my pal, Louie, alone! 'Cause if I hear about any of you picking on him, it's going to be the end!"

Louie had heard enough. Boy, that Seymour Boob was a great guy. Louie took off in a flash. He never felt better in his life. He had the toughest guy in camp behind him now, and he would finally come into his own.

No more than a half-hour later, Louie decided to put his new-found power to the test. He bumped into Mac Wilson, one of the fellows that Seymour had warned.

"Hello, Mac," smiled Louie, poking him in the stomach.

"Huh?" was Mac's reaction.

"Guess you learned your lesson," said Louie, pulling at his chin.

BIFF! BAMMM! BANGGG!

That was the sound of Mac's fists on poor Louie.

"The guy must be cracked," said Mac Wilson as he walked away.

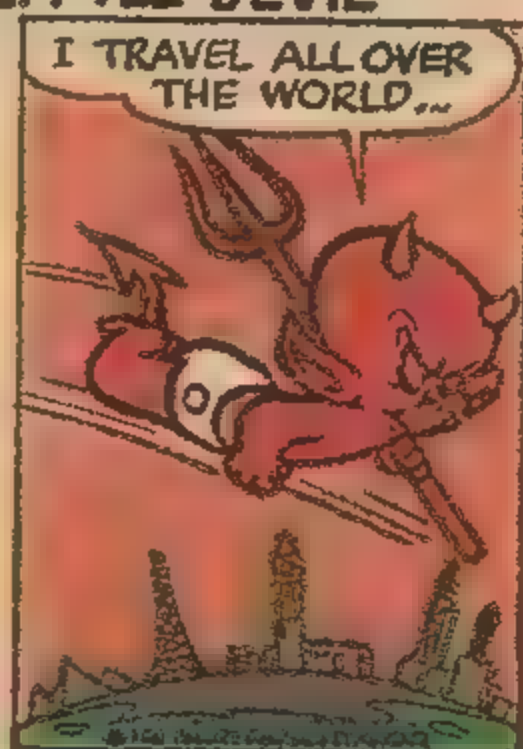

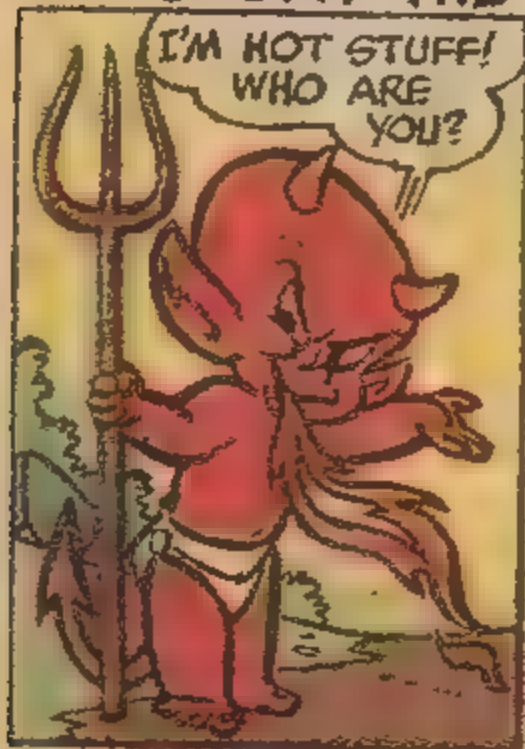

Seymour Boob came walking by soon after that. His friend was still lying on the ground.

"Louie, what happened?"

"That's what I'd like to know. Wasn't that Mac Wilson you were talking to in the barracks? And the guy still has guts enough to hit me?!"

Seymour helped pick up his pal. "Gee, Louie," he said. "I was only practicing . . . talking to myself. And by the looks of the result, I-I think I'd better change my plans!"
